of all others similarly situated,

Plaintiffs,

v.

MATCH.COM,

Defendants.

Case No.: CV11-03795 SVM (JENx)

PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

Hearing Date: May 23, 2011

Time and Location: 1:30 pm,

Courtroom 6
(Hon. Stephen V. Wilson)

I. RELIEF REQUESTED

Plaintiff moves the Court to issue the following relief:

A. Preliminarily enjoining defendant Match.com from facilitating further introductions between subscribers until it implements a system which screens out sex offenders registered in federal and local databases; and/or

1           B.     Preliminarily enjoining defendant Match.com from enrolling new 2 subscribers until it implements a system which screens out sex offenders registered 3 in federal and local databases.

4                                   II. STATEMENT OF FACTS

5           This case is before this Court since it was removed from state court by the 6 defendant Match.com the day after plaintiff filed a request for a TRO. Thereafter, 7 plaintiff filed essentially the same TRO, this time before this Honorable Court.
8 This Court issued a ruling on Friday May 6, 2011 denying the TRO, but ordering a 9 hearing on shortened time for May 23, 2011 to decide if a preliminary injunction 10 should be ordered.

11          The facts are that Jane Doe, whose identity has been disclosed as Carole 12 Markin, a single woman subscriber to Match.com, was physically forced to 13 perform oral copulation, a form of rape, on another Match.com member named 14 Alan Wurtzel. Unknown to Ms. Markin, Wurtzel had been convicted on at least six 15 separate counts of sexual assault on other women. These offenses required him to 16 register as a sex offender in Los Angeles and this fact was easily discoverable 17 through basic screening (see Decl of Pierre Merkl, Ex. 1).

18          Ms. Markin is a Harvard educated distinguished member of the Hollywood film 19 community and has voluntarily brought this Class Action on behalf of Match.com 20 members so as to compel Match.com to use reasonable and effective screening 21 techniques to prevent other known sexual predators from using this site. Ms.
22 Markin has asked for no monetary relief and simply wishes to prevent this type of 23 violent trauma to occur to the extent effective screening can reduce the risk.
24 Defendant Match.com originally refused altogether to do any kind of screening at 25 all, and had never done so. (see Decl of ML Webb, Ex. 2). After the filing of the 26 complaint in Superior Court in this matter, substantial press coverage made public 27 the facts of this rape, plaintiff's requests for screening. As a result, within 28 approximately three days, Match.com called Plaintiffs' counsel Mark L. Webb on 1 Sunday morning, April 17, 2011 at 8:30 am at his home. In that conversation, Mr.

2 Webb was told that Match.com was going to issue a media alert the following day 3 or that same day announcing its intention to begin screening sex offenders within 4 60 to 90 days by use of the Federal Sex Offender Database. Mr. Webb was invited 5 to issue a quote to be included in Match.com's media alert to the effect that he was 6 pleased with Match.com's announcement. Mr. Webb declined, and thereafter 7 asked Match.com through its attorneys to meet and confer about quicker and more 8 effective means to screen out sex offenders. Although this request to meet and 9 confer was made several times and the local rules require the attorneys to at least 10 attempt to do so, Match.com attorneys have repeatedly refused forcing Webb to 11 file the instant motion for preliminary injunction on behalf of the public's safety.

12 Submitted along with this motion are declarations of two separate reputable 13 investigative background check firms stating categorically that screening of sex 14 offenders could be implemented in a matter of a few days. Also, these experts 15 state that a check of the Federal Sex Offender Database is not effective and would 16 need to be accompanied by a check of the county of residence of the member 17 wherever possible. (see Decls of Merkl, Ex. 1 and Decls of Mallette Ex. 3).

18 Match.com is the largest on-line dating service in the world and charges its 19 members each month for a subscription which must be paid by credit card.
20 Match.com advertises actively on television that "one in five relationships in 21 America begin with on-line dating." It further advertises that more marriages 22 result from Match.com dates than any other service.

23 Match.com has millions of members and its holding corporation, IAC, owns 24 numerous other dating sites of which Match.com is the largest. Match.com has 25 successfully set up a computer system which technologically allows for 26 communication among members anywhere in the world. It is without a doubt that 27 Match.com and its holding company IAC has the most technologically advanced 28

1 communication systems anywhere and is growing! Presumably, they are capable 2 of implementing an effective sex offender screening system at will.

3 Plaintiff Carol Markin, known as Jane Doe in this case, seeks only that which is 4 reasonable and appropriate for public safety: that Match.com implement more 5 effective screening techniques so that other women need not endure her life-6 changing trauma and the unduly risk of rape from sexual predators with a known 7 history. This case is one of first impression since at no other time has a for-profit 8 dating site been brought to Court to test its standards for screening sex offenders.
9 Plaintiff will amend the complaint to ask Match.com to refrain from signing up 10 new members until they put into effect appropriate and effective screening so as to 11 minimize or at least reduce the risk of rape to other members.

12 II. LEGAL ARGUMENT

13 A. Legal Standards for Granting Preliminary Injunctions

14 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65 gives this Court broad discretion to issue 15 preliminary injunction in order to avoid further harm to any party. Here, it is too 16 late to stop what happened to Jane Doe. However, it is not too late to take 17 appropriate measures to stop it from happening again since millions of people use 18 Defendant's web-site to set-up dates every day.

19 The United States Supreme Court recently articulated with specificity the 20 showing necessary to succeed in obtaining a preliminary injunction. In Winter v.
21 Natural Res. Def. Council, the Court said that a plaintiff must demonstrate:

- 22 (1) that he is likely to succeed on the merits;
- 23 (2) that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of
- 24 preliminary relief;
- 25 (3) that the balance of equities tips in his favor; and
- 26 (4) that an injunction is in the public interest.

27 Winter v. Natural Res. Def. Council (2008) 129 S. Ct. 365, 374. In Winter, the 28 Supreme Court found that the plaintiff failed to meet this burden. There,

1 environmental organizations were concerned that the Navy's use of mid-frequency 2 active sonar in training exercises would cause serious harm marine life. They 3 sought a preliminary injunction. The court decided that it was not in the public 4 interests to limit the Navy's use of sonar because the alleged irreparable injury to 5 marine species was outweighed by the public interest and the Navy's interest in 6 effective, realistic training of its sailors.

7 Using the standard announced by the Supreme Court, the Ninth Circuit has 8 upheld the preliminary injunctions. For example, an injunction was ordered when 9 the Alliance for the Wild Rockies brought suit against the Units States Forest 10 Service seeking to enjoin logging project and timber sales. There, this Circuit, only 11 three months ago, held that "'serious questions going to the merits' and a hardship 12 balance that tips sharply toward the plaintiff can support issuance of an injunction, 13 assuming that the other two elements of the Winter test are also met." Alliance for 14 the Wild Rockies v. Cottrell (9th Cir. 2011) 632 F.3d 1127, 1132. Under this 15 approach, the elements of the preliminary injunction test are balanced, so that a 16 stronger showing of one element may offset a weaker showing or another. For 17 example, a stronger showing of irreparable harm to plaintiff might offset a lesser 18 showing of likelihood of success on the merits. Id. (citing Clear Channel Outdoor, 19 Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2003) 340 F.3d 810, 813.

20 B. The Case at Bar

21 In this action, plaintiff and the class of Match.com members that she 22 represents seek to have effective, yet economical standards for screening of sex 23 offenders implemented immediately. Specifically sought is a system of screening 24 that is both effective and economical so that not to burden the Defendant with 25 undue expense and with realization of the fact that no screening, no matter how 26 expensive, can be failsafe. The system requested would be substantially more 27 effective in discovering such sex offenders than the one proposed by the defendant.
 28 This case easily satisfies the four prong test set up in Winters.

1. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

Plaintiff has submitted letters and declarations establishing that Defendant's proposed screening system is both ineffective and untimely. Plaintiff has pled in the Complaint and accompanying documents before this Court that attempts to meet and confer with defendant have been met with outright refusals to even discuss the matter. Defendant, failed to discuss the matter or put forth any evidence of why it's screening system is superior, has presented no proof or support for its position, and no justification for its failure to at least discuss the matter. Indeed, it is unlikely that any such evidence supporting their position will be forthcoming.

The fact remains that plaintiff would prevail on the merits because defendant's announced screening system is deficient: there is no need to wait 60-90 days, a time frame that is both unnecessarily long and unnecessarily vague. Furthermore, Match.com's intended use of the Federal Sex Offender Database is incompetent to turn up, with any degree of success, sex offenders and rapists who must register at the county level and whose names may never reach the federal database. A search of the county of residence is both easy to perform and inexpensive or free in many metropolitan areas; there is no reason why this should not be included in the search. Certainly, Defendant has put forth no evidence to the contrary.

Therefore, plaintiff is likely to succeed on the merits.

2. Irreparable Harm

When a woman is a victim of rape or sexual assault, it can change her life forever. Carole Markin, in her attached declaration describes her ongoing treatment with a therapist and her inability to sustain an intimate relationship with a man due to the fears she lives with from her rape. It is clear that this is a response common to rape victims.

1 Statistically, a million or more date rapes occur each year according to 2 Department of Justice. If Match.com is the largest on-line dating service, as it 3 claims to be, we need no statistics professor to tell us that many women are at risk 4 absent appropriate screening standards. The fact that these standards can be 5 implemented almost immediately given the sophisticated technology available 6 dictates that this be done at once, not in 60-90 days, or on Match.com timetable.
 7 Match.com cannot explain why even one woman should have to suffer the risk of 8 going on a date with a man who might be a convicted sex offender screenable 9 through use of appropriate methods.

10 It is also true that sex offenders have the highest rate of recidivism of any 11 crime, which fact would be proven at trial. This means that such sex offenders are 12 likely to subject other women to rape and other types of sexual assaults are given 13 the opportunity. Therefore, one cannot imagine a counter argument where lack of 14 irreparable harm can be shown.

15 The issuance of a preliminary injunction requiring that adequate standards 16 be implemented immediately will substantially reduce the likelihood of 17 unsuspecting victim being raped.

18 3. Balance of Equities

19 Match.com is a billion dollar company, owned by a multi-billion dollar 20 company called IAC. It spans the globe and affects millions of people's lives every 21 day. It has the power and the wealth to communicate to any forum it desires.
 22 Further, it is growing more every day with its recent expansion into China.
 23 (Plaintiff is issuing Notices to Appear at the Hearing at to Company executives 24 who can shed more light).

25 On the other side of this case is a single woman who has had the courage to 26 reveal her identity at great cost. (See Decl. of Carole Markin, Ex. 4)

1 Obviously the disparate conditions of these opposing parties should be 2 considered by this Court in balancing the equities in the context of what plaintiff is 3 requesting for herself and on behalf of the class of Match.com members.

4 It is undisputed that a woman who goes on a date set up through on-line 5 dating takes a risk and must use reasonable care in the face of that risk. However, it 6 is inequitable and unfair to expect her to be solely responsible for that risk without 7 at least asking the Defendant, who was paid to facilitate the introduction, to share 8 in it. (This has, in effect, been acknowledged already by Match.com's own 9 concession that screening of sex offenders is necessary).

10 Therefore, the equities would dictate that Match.com be ordered to use 11 effective and prompt screening techniques.

12 4. Public Interest

13 The public has a clear interest on many levels in reducing the number of 14 rapes that occur in this country. Our hospitals and doctors are charged with treating 15 these victims after the fact. We have rape crisis centers whose sole function is to 16 care for these unfortunates. We have entire divisions of police department 17 dedicated to sex offenses. Many or all of the above services are paid for by 18 taxpayers. To the extent that Match.com fails to be responsible in doing its share in 19 reducing the number of such life-changing traumas, it costs our nation untold 20 millions of dollars, because of its irresponsibility.

21 Match.com is in the marketplace of facilitating dates amongst strangers. It 22 does so for a healthy profit. Many investors have become multi-millionaires due to 23 Match.com's operations. Along with power and wealth comes responsibility. Thus, 24 the public interest factor demands that Match.com contribute reasonably to 25 reducing the damage in this arena.

26 5. The Winters standard has been completely met

27 As set forth above, Plaintiff meets all factors for preliminary relief; Plaintiff 28 is entitled to a preliminary injunction. While the first two elements are met adequately, elements three and four are overwhelmingly proven in plaintiffs' favor: (1) the balance of equities, measuring the relative power and technological sophistication of Match.com compared to any individual class member weighs in Plaintiff's favor; and (2) the public interest in avoiding what is one of the most abhorrent crimes in our society that leaves a horrible impact on the victim forever<sup>1</sup> is likewise strongly in Plaintiff's favor.

Therefore, given the most recent direction from this appellate circuit, plaintiff has more than satisfied the legal standards for the preliminary injunction.

III. CONCLUSION

This is a classic case of a hugely powerful and successful corporation using that power against the individuals who made it wealthy in the first place. With its untold billions, Match.com has used lawyers in Los Angeles, Texas and unknown other places to refuse to even consider alternatives to an inadequate sex offender screening plan that they stubbornly adhere to, inadequate as it is.

Thankfully in this Country the judiciary is available to those of us who are less wealthy and powerful in order to settle such disputes regardless of this disparity in power and wealth. That is why the figure of Lady Justice is blindfolded; so that justice can be dispensed without regard to the parties' relative power.
